OLIVA SERIE O

The “excellent” and “well-constructed” Oliva didn’t disappoint upon being lit, yielding up an “aromatic and full-bodied” aroma paired with a “smooth and mellow” flavor “with hints of wood.” As it continued to burn (evenly), the cigar left “a very full-bodied taste on the back of the tongue” — and a pile of white, crumbly ash. General consensus was this cigar qualified as “medium to full-bodied.” An old-style, screw-top tube “got the job done” but wasn’t “particularly innovative, design-wise.”
